

About the Book

Title: On the Wings of the Wind: A Journey to Faith

ISBN: 9781880292334

Publisher: LangMarc Publishing

Date of Publication: December 2007

Description: Skillfully woven throughout the book is a spiritual road map that will aid readers who seek intimacy with God and a compass for their life's journey. On the Wings of the Wind offers spiritual guidance to teens and adults, reminding them that God is always with them whether they're young or old.

Back Cover Blurb: In the crippling agony of grief, disappointment, loneliness, sickness, and broken relationships, healing is available through the power of the Holy Spirit.

Skillfully woven throughout these pages is a spiritual road map that will aid readers who seek intimacy with God and a compass for their life's journey. Share in the extraordinary leap of faith of a newly-wed grandmother, suddenly an army chaplain's wife, as she and her new husband embark on his final military assignment abroad the week after they were married.

On the Wings of the Wind is a profoundly biblical easy-to-read story of entering each new phase of life guided by the Holy Spirit. This is a love story: a story of longtime love of spouse and family, the devastating heartbreak of loss, and a new love that now binds two people together as they embrace each day with enthusiasm, a sense of mission, and, foremost and center, with the all-encompassing presence of the living God.

Inspiration for On the Wings of the Wind

by Patricia Eytcheson Taylor

Although I never lost the Christian faith that my parents instilled in me, in adulthood I allowed marriage, family, and business to overshadow my walk with God. After the death of my husband, I cried out to the Lord, and He answered. From that moment, the Holy Spirit has guided my life.

I later married and shared in the ministry of James, an Army chaplain, who is my coauthor. Many people have asked me about my strong faith, so I decided to share my story to inspire others who seek to deepen their relationship with the Lord. After I started writing, James became enthusiastic about the project and joined me in writing the book.

On the Wings of the Wind is the story of my spiritual journey, but it's not mine alone. It is the story of the relationship anyone can have with a loving God who wants to guide their life as He guides mine.

www.onthewingsofthewind.com
onwings@onthewingsofthewind.com

About the Authors of On the Wings of the Wind

Patricia Eytcheson Taylor &
The Reverend Doctor James C. Taylor

Address: 102 Cherokee Lane
San Antonio, TX 78232

Telephone: 210-494-2300

E-Mail: onwings@onthewingsofthewind.com

Web Site: www.onthewingsofthewind.com

The authors are available for media interviews and speaking engagements at churches and organizations.

Patricia Eytcheson Taylor is a wife and grandmother who has published four children's books about horses, including the popular series "Catch A Winner." She and her husband built a three million dollar corporation with integrity and honesty, then at the death of her husband, she lost it all. Her strong spiritual faith allowed her to find a renewed living relationship with her Lord Jesus Christ through his Holy Spirit. Recently she married a military chaplain and after 9/11 was with military families in Europe, seeing the sacrifices families make so military members can serve. After her husband's retirement from the Army, she shared in his pastoral ministry.

The Reverend Doctor James C. Taylor has been a Lutheran clergyman for 40 years and recently retired from the U.S. Army Chaplains Corps with 28 years of service. After retirement, he served as interim pastor of several local churches. He has written and published articles on faith, ministry, marriage, and family therapy in Psychology Today and the Military Chaplain's Review. In his various duties in the military he has served as the Burn Ward Chaplain at Brooke Army Medical Hospital, Combat Troop Chaplain, and Command and Post Chaplain at several Posts. He has trained more than 300 chaplains and chaplain assistants in Spiritual Fitness and Combat Ministry and has personally ministered to a million soldiers and their families.

Patricia and James Taylor live in San Antonio, Texas. Since retirement from the U. S. Army Chaplain Corps, James has served as a Lutheran interim pastor in several congregations. Pat shares in this ministry through her gifts of compassion, visitation, and speaking. They speak about the Holy Spirit at churches and Christian organizations.